DESCRIPTION

D. Martyn Lloyd–Jones and the Holy Spirit: A Theological Assessment

- With foreword by Sinclair B. Ferguson
- Includes unpublished material by Lloyd–Jones
- Fascinating insights into Lloyd–Jones's theology

This groundbreaking study examines D. Martyn Lloyd–Jones's theology of the Holy Spirit, particularly focusing on his controversial teaching about the baptism of the Spirit, revival, and the relationship between Word and Spirit in preaching. Drawing extensively on Lloyd–Jones's sermons, lectures, and previously unpublished materials, Philip Eveson demonstrates that Lloyd–Jones stood firmly within the Reformed tradition while emphasising the experiential aspect of Christianity that characterised early Calvinistic Methodism.

Particularly valuable is the detailed examination of Lloyd–Jones's philosophy of preaching and his insistence on both doctrinal accuracy and spiritual power. The author convincingly argues that Lloyd–Jones's emphasis on the Holy Spirit's work offers vital insights for contemporary Reformed Christianity.

Two valuable appendices provide previously unpublished material: Lloyd–Jones's important address on the Welsh Revival of 1904–05, and his personal spiritual journal from 1930–31. An extensive bibliography guides readers to primary and secondary sources for further study.

AUTHOR

Philip Eveson is the author of a number of Old Testament commentaries. He has been in pastoral ministry for many years and became principal of the London Theological Seminary. In retirement, he continues to teach the Old Testament and to preach. He and his wife, Jennifer, attend Borras Park Church, Wrexham, where his family also worships.

ENDORSEMENTS

The book will eliminate many misunderstandings concerning Lloyd–Jones's doctrine of the Holy Spirit, while at the same time it will convict readers concerning the need for the unction from on high for preaching God's Word. There is no doubt that much encouragement will result from studying this book.

Senior Pastor, Allgoden Presbyterian Church; Professor of Systematic Theology, Korea Theological Seminary, South Korea

I have long considered the twentieth–century ministry of Martyn Lloyd–Jones to be one of the great gifts of our Lord to his Church. This fresh and sympathetic study of his teaching on the work of the Holy Spirit in the Christian life, revival, and preaching by a fellow Welshman provided this reader with a renewed appreciation of the Doctor's life and ministry.

Michael A. G. Haykin
Professor of Church History and Biblical Spirituality, The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Kentucky

A magnificent, readable and completely edifying book on the life and theology of my grandfather which I enjoyed enormously and which I very much hope is read as widely as possible. I commend it with thankfulness and enthusiasm.

Christopher Catherwood
Grandson of Martyn Lloyd–Jones and has taught 20th century and church history at Cambridge

This is an enormously valuable book ... I determined to purchase three copies for the three of my grandsons who are preachers. How helpful they will find it!
