DESCRIPTION

Honest, transformative conversations about faith

Drawing on interviews with leading thinkers, real-life stories, and deep scriptural insight, this book "unframes" the gospel, removing the negative stereotypes and misunderstandings that often cloud its message.

Why Read Unframed?

- Break Free from Stereotypes: Explore how Christianity has been "framed" in modern culture and how to see it in a new, authentic light.
- Engaging Conversations: Benefit from interviews with renowned scholars, skeptics, and believers, offering diverse perspectives on faith, doubt, and meaning.
- Relevant for Today: Address the challenges of secularism, "me-ism," and religious decline with hope, clarity, and intellectual honesty.
- Practical Wisdom: Learn how ancient truths and contemporary research can guide you through questions of suffering, science, and spirituality.
- Christ at the Center: Encounter Jesus—his uniqueness, divinity, and relevance—through compelling narrative and thoughtful analysis.

ENDORSEMENTS

Each chapter "unframes" – exposes false assumptions; peels back layers of misunderstanding of – a central tenet of the faith, effectively deconstructing the deconstructors.

Kevin J. Vanhoozer
Research Professor of Systematic Theology, Trinity Evangelical Divinity School, Deerfield, Illinois

... a thoroughly well researched, mind stretching (but not overbearingly so), compelling book that seeks to bring reliable answers to questions of our cultural moment.

Rupert Shelley
Director of Mission Partnerships, Crosslinks, UK

This is cultural engagement with a pastoral heart, helping people not only understand Christianity but encounter Christ himself.

Jeremy Treat
Pastor for Preaching and Vision, Reality LA; Professor of Theology, Biola University, La Mirada, California

... ideal for students and others with intellectual doubts about the plausibility of Christian faith.

John Stevens
National Director, Fellowship of Independent Evangelical Churches, Market Harborough, Leicestershire
