ENDORSEMENTS

I read one chapter a month to second graders in my Wednesday night Discovery Club at our church. They love hearing these true life adventures.Tonight they asked when Keyangak lived in Africa. I'd love to be able to tell them.

Diane Bitterman, Pennsylvania

When we returned to Africa for a year we wished to keep in touch with our six-year-old granddaughter. So we dug into our past experiences and sent her some stories on tape. Later she urged us to publish them so that other children may taste the flavour of Africa.

Whole tribes today still await the message of Jesus' love. African Adventures is about sharing this message with people in circumstances unlike our own, dogged by poverty and many dangers. Despite these differences, the Gospel speaks to human need in every culture and each chapter has a biblical lesson which any child (or parent) can take to heart.
