The twelve books between Daniel and Matthew are unfamiliar to many believers, so this series accurately introduces these inspired writings with vivid images and simple words that engage children and adults alike. Each volume both retells the prophet's message to his original audience and relates its rich truths to Jesus and God's people today.

This third boxed set contains:

- Amos and God's Roaring Voice
- Micah's Hope
- Hosea and God's Love
- Zechariah's Encouragement

ENDORSEMENTS

The "God's Daring Dozen" book sets:
- Encourage biblical literacy
- Make the minor prophets accessible
- Fill a big gap in the children's publishing industry by sharing about stories your child may not have read before

These books help kids learn about lesser known Bible characters and the lessons we can learn from them.

You'll find lots of quotations in these books because many of them are truly just paraphrases of the biblical text. Depending on the book, it can be told more like a story summary (Hosea, Jonah, etc.) while others are almost entirely a paraphrase chapter by chapter (Nahum).

These books stress the importance of the whole Bible, not only in their subject content of sharing the minor prophets but also in their inclusion of the full story: for instance in Jonah, many other children's books end with Jonah delivering the message to the Ninevites and their repentance but this one also includes what happens after the message where Jonah is angry at God in his encounter at the shaded plant.

One note: the pastor at my church has comedically said in sermon recently "you won't find this in a children's book or a veggie tales episode" when teaching on difficult passage... These ones challenge that statement with lots of depictions of God's judgment, people's sin, etc. that I would recommend a pre–read to make sure you determine an appropriate age in your home.

I received a review copy of this set. All opinions are my own.

The God's Daring Dozen series is made up of wonderful little books that will bless curious little people, and the not–so–little people who have the privilege of reading to them.
