Stories from her experience

AUTHOR

Helen Roseveare (1925–2016) went to the Congo as a missionary between 1953 and 1973. A pioneer of vital medical work in the rainforests of this region, she had a major impact long after she left. Through many trials, she lived out her life striving to serve her Lord with every day and encouraging those around her to do the same.

ENDORSEMENTS

"Drawing on her long experience as a Christian, the author challenges us to deeper faith and more sacrificial service, a call which is encouraging to read and hard to answer."

Evangelicals Now

"Each time I read one of her accounts, I want to be like her, I want to know God as she does"
