The life-story of Murdo Murchison

Told as he faces terminal cancer

Full of humour and colour

AUTHOR

Murdo Murchison, born and bred in the Highlands, owned a much–respected business, close to Stirling in Scotland. A man of God who had a deep love for his home, family and community; Murdo was a founding member of Stirling Free Church, and a FC lay preacher for many years.

ENDORSEMENTS

Enjoyed the simplisity of the narrative of faith over the flesh and death. Murdo is simply trusting God through it all knowing that when one chapter closes another will open.

John Burleigh, Greenock

Murdo's testimony encourages me greatly to store up treasures of permanent value - it won't be in vain because it is ultimately all that matters on both sides of death.

Kate Forbes
MSP for Skye, Lochaber and Badenoch

I commend to you Murdo's story. More than that I commend to you Murdo's Lord, in Whom we find meaning and purpose and life in all its fullness.

Kenneth Ian MacKenzie
Minister, Braemar and Crathie parish; domestic chaplain to HM The King; previous minister, Scottish Mission in Budapest

Profound and poignant, as we see the Lord's plans and purposes for Murdo's life unfold before our eyes. I am privileged to know the man and call him my friend.

Iain MacAskill
Church planter and evangelist, Free Church of Scotland
