Anthems for a Dying Lamb

How Six Psalms (113-118) Became a Songbook for the Last Supper and the Age to Come

Philip S. Ross

RELEASE DATE 01 DECEMBER 2017

RELATED TITLES

MARKETING POINTS

Exposition of the last psalms sung by Jesus

Encourages Christians to sing the psalms

Shows how they can be used in today's church

AUTHOR

Philip S. Ross is a theological editor who studied in Wales. He worked extensively on the well-received Christian Heritage editions of The Marrow of Modern Divinity and subtitled seven John Owen works. Philip lives near Loch Lomond in Scotland with his wife and three children.

ENDORSEMENTS

The passion of Christ, even the very words Christ prayed during his agony, are drawn from the psalms, specifically Psalms 113-118. With pastoral care and sobering conviction, Philip Ross reveals why these psalms became our Savior's dying anthem.

Matthew Barrett
Associate Professor of Christian Theology, Midwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Kansas City, Missouri

Don't rush through this book; it should be savored bit by bit. You can bask in its fresh insights, squirm under its searching exposure - and all the while Dr Ross keeps you firmly tethered to Jesus. Here is a mind-filling, soul-nourishing, Christ-focused feast!

Dale Ralph Davis
Respected Author and Old Testament Scholar

Philip Ross combines literary skill, historical breadth, academic depth, and timely wit in encouraging the psalms for the church today. He gives due consideration to their original setting for the Old Testament church, to their meaning for Jesus in the Upper Room, and for the Christian church.

Terry L. Johnson
Senior Pastor, Independent Presbyterian Church, Savannah, Georgia

Whether Philip Ross is tackling the relation of the 'Egyptian Hallel' to early Jewish Passover liturgies or the task of exposition of the Psalms we meet with the same painstaking care, mastery of facts, and, above all, devout recognition of Holy Scripture as the Word of God.

Alec Motyer
(1924-2016) Well-known Bible expositor and commentary writer

TECHNICAL DETAILS

TRADE PAPERBACK
160 Pages

ISBN 9781527100879
BISAC REL006210
PRICE £9.99 $14.99