AUTHOR

Andrew David Naselli is Associate Professor of New Testament and Systematic Theology at Bethlehem College & Seminary in Minneapolis and one of the pastors of The North Church in Mounds View, Minnesota. He coauthored the book 'Conscience' with J. D. Crowley (Crossway, 2016). He and his wife, Jenni, have been married since 2004, and God has blessed them with four daughters.

ENDORSEMENTS

Few aspects of parenting are more important—or more commonly overlooked—than informing and fostering our children's conscience. This book helps parents with that crucial task, and for that reason I highly recommend it.

Tim Challies
Author, 'Seasons of Sorrow'

Good, gospel–saturated children's books are hard to find. And even more rare is a book like this for kids that points them to the cross while teaching on the topic of the conscience. My children love this book! The first time I read it with my children it instantly led to heart–level conversations together as we considered how best to listen to our conscience as we make decisions. The imagery of chocolate chips and scraped knees kept all of us engaged and brought us into the everyday story of childhood while helping us consider the little voice in our heads. We're looking forward to reading this again and again with our kids!

Dave and Gloria Furman
Senior Pastor, Redeemer Church of Dubai and author of 'Kiss the Wave' and 'Being There'; and his wife, Gloria, author of 'Missionsal Motherhood' and 'Alive in Him'

Just what a parent needs to explain conscience to their kids.

Julian Hardyman
Senior Pastor, Eden Baptist Church, Cambridge

If my kids could be five years old again, I would definitely read this book to them. One of the best things about a biblically rooted children's book is that it helps parents as much as kids. I have no doubt that will happen with this book and while you're at it, tell your teenagers they can sit all the way across the room, but they do have to listen the first time too.
