Read all three volumes of Helen Roseveare's autobiography combined in one book for the first time – Give me This Mountain, He Gave Us a Valley and Digging Ditches. Marvel at how God worked all throughout Helen's life, through her training, call to the mission field and work as a medic in the Congo, but also through civil war, brutality and rape. See how her faith and simple daily obedience led her to meet with God on the mountain top, but also in the darkest of valleys. A captivating read from a well–known and loved missionary.

AUTHOR

Helen Roseveare (1925–2016) went to the Congo as a missionary between 1953 and 1973. A pioneer of vital medical work in the rainforests of this region, she had a major impact long after she left. Through many trials, she lived out her life striving to serve her Lord with every day and encouraging those around her to do the same.

ENDORSEMENTS

I'll never forget hearing Helen Roseveare speak: immediate authority; convincing clarity; relentless passion. Now her three classic works have been brought together for a new generation of readers. Prepare to be challenged, moved, and inspired!

… an amazing autobiography that I'd encourage any Christian to read. You'll learn of Helen and her adventures for the Lord, but greater than that, you'll see the beauty of Jesus in her life, even in the most difficult of circumstances.

Jonathan Carswell

I'm delighted to see these Christian classics together in one volume. Helen Roseveare's story is a frank and honest account of her time as a missionary in Africa and beyond. There is no other biography that covers the ups downs and heartaches of life better than Helen's.

Catherine MacKenzie
Author and CF4K Editor

Helen Roseveare sacrificed a great deal for the work of the Lord, but she gained everything. She lived and died clothed in the righteousness of Christ, and she testified to His goodness all the way to the end. … even now, her faith continues to speak to all who read her books.
