AUTHOR

Nell and Jack Chinchen left the comfort of life in the United States to become missionaries in Liberia, West Africa. This is their story.

ENDORSEMENTS

"The story of these servants of God who have been tried by fire will enlighten you and your soul will be stirred to read about the warm heart of Africa that welcomed The Yankee Officer and the Southern Belle with drums in the night."

Franklin Graham
President & CEO of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association and Samaritans Purse

"From the refined coast of Mississippi to the shores and jungles of Africa, behold God's faithfulness to this couple and His shaping and sharpening them into instruments for His glory."

Ligon Duncan
Chancellor and CEO, Reformed Theological Seminary

"The Chinchen's are the real deal. The many thousands of lives that they have touched are testament to the calling that God has placed on them. Africa and the world are richer for their obedient service to our Lord. This is a must-read for all who love to see the Hand of God at work today!"

John B. Sorensen
President, Evangelism Explosion International

"I am quite sure that this "autobiography" will stir and embolden thoughtful readers to strike out on their own, eager to face "crosses" in order to end up with "crowns." I know it is stirring and emboldening me!"

Henry Krabbendam
Professor of Theology, Covenant College, Lookout Mountain, Georgia
