AUTHOR

Christine Dillon is a missionary with OMF in Taiwan where she is involved in discipling and training churches. She says 'Please also pray as you go, that God will use you for his glory to disciple others'.

ENDORSEMENTS

... biblical, easy to read, extremely practical, and has useful questions for reflection. It's enough to get your teeth into if you've been involved in discipling already, but not overwhelming if you're thinking of taking up the challenge and need some help.

Evangelicals Now

Accessible, Practical, Instilling Confidence by its Simplicity: When I did a year as a church intern, I was given the opportunity to disciple two new believers. I thought I'd better read a book about discipling first and this is the one that caught my eye. It was so helpful to read through step-by-step principles of discipleship, written by someone who has a lot of experience, and to realise that this wasn't the first time I had discipled someone. It turned out I had been discipling friends informally for years! This book put into words what I had been doing and helped me think through what works well and where I had left gaps, giving me the confidence to step forward more intentionally in this work that should be part of every believer's life.

Rachel, Cross-Cultural Worker

This book was sent as a gift to me by Christian Focus when I wrote to them asking for another book. What a pleasant surprise! Helping Christians along the path to discipleship is something everyone says is an urgent need worldwide but which few really practice. It is not an impossibly hard task, and could be one of the most enriching experiences for a Christian. This book explains the process in an easy to digest and practical way. Highly recommended!
