ENDORSEMENTS

Aiming to reveal God in all His glory, this in-depth volume (and series) is a rare find amongst the plethora of publications available for ministry to women.

Margaret Köstenberger

Associate Professor of Theology & Women's Ministry and Faculty Coordinator of Women's Ministry Programs, Midwestern Baptist Theological Seminary

This is an outstanding and accessible treatment of the attributes of God.

Robert Letham

Wales Evangelical School of Theology, Bridgend, Wales

Understanding who God is and what he is like is the secret to growing in Christlikeness. I'm so excited to have The Good Portion: God to teach me and others to how to meditate on God.

Arlette Mbugua

Wife of Kenneth Mbugua, senior pastor of Emmanuel Baptist Church, Nairobi, Kenya

"...happiness cannot be fully discovered as long as we remain ignorant of God's Word" (95).

Do you long to hear from God and to know Him more intimately? Do you spend time in the Bible daily, share it with others, and turn to it first in the face of trials, suffering, and weakness? Do you find yourself longing for and delighting in the Word each day? Are the Words of God in the Bible more precious to you than your most valuable possession and sweeter to you than the sweetest treat? How and when we approach the Bible betrays what we believe about the Bible

Christian Focus Publications has begun a promising ten-book series called The Good Portion. In its first volume, Scripture, Keri Folmar shows us where and how we can hear God most clearly. Her ultimate goal is to "shed light on the treasure and the sweetness of the sacred Scriptures" (pg. 17). She begins by addressing the nature of the Scriptures as God's revelation of Himself and then, progresses to the characteristics of the Bible that naturally flow as a result of its Author. She shows us that the Bible is not just a book to be read, but a living, breathing God who speaks to us through His Word.
