ENDORSEMENTS

Reeder's urgent call to develop Biblical leaders who are courageous, compassionate, and selfless is a battle cry to rescue our nation, our culture, and our churches from the suffocation of self–gratification.

Bryan Chapell
Pastor, Grace Presbyterian Church, Peoria, Illinois

Reeder is disturbed that churches have entrusted the world with defining what it means to be a leader. He tries to take that job back—and with it, he gives us help in knowing how we can develop and deploy those leaders in the church and beyond.

Mark Dever
Senior Pastor, Capitol Hill Baptist Church and President, 9Marks.org, Washington, DC

Drawing on a deep understanding of Scripture, a lifetime of ministry in the church, and a practical knowledge of military history, Reeder lays out clear Biblical principles for success in spiritual leadership.

Philip G. Ryken
President, Wheaton College, Wheaton, Illinois

With compelling examples and practical suggestions, this book will challenge you to be a leader and to develop other leaders, and it will help you do both.

Robert C. Cannada
Chancellor Emeritus, Reformed Theological Seminary
