AUTHOR

Dai Hankey is a church planter in Wales who leads Red Community, a Christian charity that fights human trafficking in Wales. He is married to Michelle and they have 4 children.

ENDORSEMENTS

The stories about Elen took me to memories and stories I have about my own kids which stirred my affections for them, but more importantly for Jesus. Dai brings out the clear gospel truths we so often miss in the everyday of looking after our kids. A great book that will stir the hearts of Christians but would be a wonderful gift for any parent.

Steve Robinson
Pastor, Cornerstone Church, Liverpool, UK

This is a beautifully put together little book that will have a profound impact on all who read it. And read it you should! Pause on the deep truths that are written from the heart, take a moment to consider your life and its meaning. Make sure your friends read it.

Carl Beech
UK Director, The Message Trust & President, Christian Vision for Men

This is a delightful book that also has some powerful things to say. I guarantee it will bring a lump to the throat or a tear to the eye of even the most hardened reader.

Tim Chester
Author and senior faculty member, Crosslands Training

The Bible makes it clear that parents bear the privilege and responsibility of training up their children. Yet children have a way of training up their parents at the same time. I loved hearing what Dai Hankey has learned about life and faith through raising his precious little girl.
