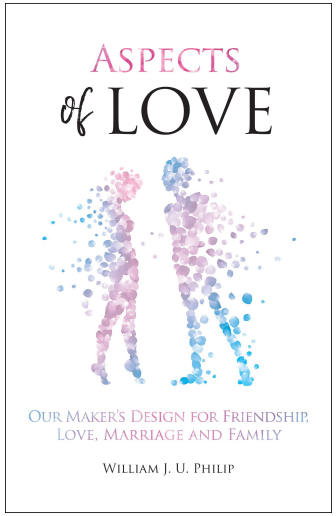
Aspects of Love

Our Maker's design for friendship, love, marriage and family

William J. U. Philip

RELEASE DATE 27 MAY 2019



RELATED TITLES

DESCRIPTION

MARKETING POINTS

Looks at love in various forms – friendship, marriage, family

An antidote to the loneliness epidemic

Affirms that all people are designed to love

AUTHOR

William Philip has been senior minister of The Tron Church in Glasgow since 2004, and is chairman of Cornhill Scotland, training pastors for expository preaching. Formerly he was director of ministry at The Proclamation Trust in London, and prior to ordination, a doctor specializing in cardiology. He has authored a number of books, including Teaching John (with Dick Lucas), Teaching Matthew (with David Jackman), Why We Pray, Songs for a Saviour's Birth and Aspects of Love.

ENDORSEMENTS

… here is a warm–hearted, unapologetically biblical guide to navigating the minefield of human relationships. Its refreshing honesty and candid application of the Bible's teaching to the real issues behind a host of contemporary questions make it stand out as a key resource for Christian people, at every stage of life.

David & Heather Jackman
Past staff members, The Proclamation Trust

I will be eternally grateful for Willie's clarity of thought, concern for truth, and fatherly care for my husband and I as we navigated friendship, marriage, and the desire for children. As members of the Tron Church we benefited immeasurably from hearing Willie's preaching on these issues. Just as much, we benefited from having a place at Willie and Rebecca's dinner table, where we could discuss how the truth of the scriptures rubs into the grain of every day life. His teaching (and sometimes our shared tears, in the harder times) gave us a greater confidence is the Lord's kindness and wisdom. If you don't have that invite to dinner, this book will serve as an excellent consolation prize!

Caroline Dodds

In an age of individualism with the resultant societal crises arising from family and relational breakdown, Dr Philip's book, Aspects of Love, based on biblically inspired truths about human relationships, could not be better timed to help people navigate the swirling currents of contemporary political correctness. Those who read it will be strengthened in being light in a darkening world. I heartedly commend it.

Lord Michael Farmer

All of us live in a network of relationships that have been affected by the fall. William Philip draws on his experience as doctor, pastor, father and husband not only to give us a diagnosis but also to show us that – through the Holy Spirit – God is working to transform and renew every aspect of our lives. He is changing our relationships and changing us through our relationships. This book is accessible, engaging and biblically grounded and I wholeheartedly recommend it.

TECHNICAL DETAILS

LARGE TRADE PAPERBACK
192 Pages

ISBN 9781527103382
BISAC REL012100
PRICE £9.99 $12.99