DESCRIPTION

Paul, an apostle, missionary church planter, and a pastor of great experience, wrote to Timothy and Titus, his trusted younger colleagues in the ministry. They were facing huge challenges in serving the gospel, trying to keep their churches safe from charlatans and false teaching while doing the work of an evangelist in places famously full of idolatry, immorality, and entrenched opposition. Paul's letters gave them the guidance they needed in such a moment, to keep them on track. And his words contain vital instruction and encouragement for those in the ministry today.

ENDORSEMENTS

… a stirring call from 2 Timothy and Titus for ministers to have confidence in the gospel and to be willing to suffer for it. Gatiss highlights the vital need for ministers who exhibit Christ–like character and practice personal godliness and purity.

John Stevens
National Director, Fellowship of Independent Evangelical Churches, Market Harborough, Leicestershire

Lee Gatiss opens the Word of God in these epistles with a comprehensive depth and in a manner that will bring clarity and confidence to the reader. This book is a treasure for both lay and ordained.

Julian Dobbs
Bishop of the Anglican Diocese of the Living Word in North America

… clearly addresses the present context and his strong and lively words challenge us to live and speak for Christ however unpopular that may be. Read it to be strengthened.

Peter Jensen
Retired Archbishop of Sydney, Sydney, Australia

Paul's words to Timothy, 'fulfil your ministry,' are as relevant and urgent today as they were when Paul first wrote them. As I eye the finish line, I am grateful to Lee Gatiss for drawing me back again and again to Paul's words and for helping me think through their application both for myself and for those of the next generation that I am privileged to train.

Mervyn Eloff
Rector, St James, Kenilworth, South Africa
