DESCRIPTION

A Biblical Case for Thinking Clearly About Marijuana

As marijuana becomes increasingly accepted, Christians face difficult questions: Is using it a matter of Christian liberty? Is it really different from alcohol? What about medical marijuana? And if the Bible never explicitly mentions cannabis, can Christians say that using it is wrong?

In Christ and Cannabis, Sean DeMars draws on his own experience of marijuana addiction and deliverance through Christ to offer a clear biblical case against recreational marijuana use. He considers:

- Spirit-filled living and the influence of the Holy Spirit
- Sober-mindedness and spiritual vigilance
- Faithful stewardship of our bodies, minds and time
- Suffering well without seeking escape through intoxication
- Self-control and freedom from being mastered by substances

For Christians seeking biblical clarity amid a changing culture, Christ and Cannabis offers a thoughtful and challenging response.
