Letters to a Student

Encouraging Words from a Christian Mentor

Donald Drew

RELEASE DATE 20 MAY 2005

RELATED TITLES

AUTHOR

Dr. Donald J. Drew studied at Cambridge and was President of the Christian Union. He worked with Francis Schaeffer at L'Abri for six years. He has taught English, spoken in many different countries and is still involved with students at L'Abri.

ENDORSEMENTS

The letters are very well written and he very appropriately uses references to his own experiences, to literary sources and to the natural world. He also has a good sense of humour. This book would make a very suitable gift for a young Christian just starting at university, or already in the midst of a university course.

Phemie Cromie
'The Covenanter Witness' (October 2003)

The intellectual and emotional effort that Drew puts into his letters is impressive and bears witness to his gift of speaking God's word into younger lives. An encouragement to consider the place of godly mentoring in the Christian community, especially for young people, those whose own heart is uncertain, but his brother's is sure.

Naomi Richardson
'The Reformed Theological Review' 63:2 (August 2004)

An affectionate uncle and peer at the same time Dr Drew shows how he rests in God and encourages readers to do the same. Very readable!

Dr. Art Lindsley
Senior Fellow C.S. Lewis Institute

His challenge to a young person is simple and profound: decisions make a difference.

J. Douglas Holladay

TECHNICAL DETAILS

TRADE PAPERBACK
192 Pages

ISBN 9781857928662
BISAC REL012070
PRICE £7.99 $11.99