AUTHOR

Michael has been married over 40 years, has four children, two more by marriage, four grand treasures, and Flannery the puppy. A Georgetown University graduate, he has worked for the IRS, for his church as a pastor and administrator, then as an IT manager. He currently teaches English as a Second Language. He and his wife, Margaret, live in the Washington, DC, area.

ENDORSEMENTS

I felt that I could follow the Lord to the end when I had completed this book. Grace can keep me going ... and you too.

Geoff Thomas
Conference Speaker and author, Aberystwyth, Wales

Black is not suggesting that a genuine Christian can lose salvation at the end, but he is highlighting the danger of slipping away from the zeal that marked a good beginning. This book challenges the reader; it will convict; it will comfort and encourage. It will also warn about becoming complacent.

Calum MacInnes
Retired Minister, Kingsview Christian Centre, Inverness

... challenges us to ensure that our love is rooted in Jesus, and to make our love for him our greatest treasure. It leaves us with a glorious vision of heaven that will motive us to press on and win the prize.

John Stevens
National Director, Fellowship of Independent Evangelical Churches, Market Harborough, Leicestershire

Through humor, personal candor and biblical illustrations, Michael Black takes readers on a journey to understand that the end of their lives is determined by every minute leading up to that pivotal moment. I highly recommend it for taking stock of your current fruitfulness and purpose in your life, to re–orient yourself to entering the joy of your Master.
