Providential preservation of Scripture

How, where and why God preserves Scripture

AUTHOR

Richard Brash is a Mission Partner with Japan Christian Link. He is a graduate of Japan Bible Seminary in Tokyo and is currently studying for a PhD in systematic theology at the University of Edinburgh. Previously he was an Associate Minister at St Ebbe's Church in Oxford.

ENDORSEMENTS

This is a wonderfully lucid introduction to a much–neglected doctrine. It will help many to grow in their confidence in the Bible and in their adoration in the sovereign, speaking God.

Vaughan Roberts
Rector of St Ebbe's, Oxford and Director of Proclamation Trust

We who live after the history of special revelation that preceded the Bible and led to its canonical form rightly assume that God has preserved that revelation for us in the Bible we possess today. But not many Christians reflect on this assumption, and even fewer know how to defend it. In this slim but potent book, Richard Brash not only urges us to 'mind the gap' in our thinking on Scripture's preservation through the ages, he shows us how to close this gap by looking to the teaching of Scripture itself. This book, written by a true pastor–scholar, will make you marvel at the wisdom, power, and love of God, whose written Word, like Himself, is everlastingly sure.
