DESCRIPTION

Hope in the Midst of Devastating Loss

When four-year-old Emily was diagnosed with terminal brain cancer, her mother Heather began documenting their family's devastating journey. This raw, honest memoir chronicles seven months of treatment, suffering, and ultimately saying goodbye. Through journal entries written during sleepless nights, Heather explores how childhood cancer affects marriage, siblings, community, and faith. A deeply moving testament to love, loss, and finding meaning in unimaginable circumstances.

- Heart-wrenching journal written within the storm of crisis
- Grapples with existential questions about faith, meaning and purpose
- Meditation on finding meaning in loss

This powerful testament to a mother's love and a child's courage illuminates how we might face life's deepest sorrows with honesty and hope. Essential reading for anyone walking alongside grief or seeking to understand suffering's place in life.

AUTHOR

Heather So is an occupational therapist, researcher, and mother. After caring for her terminally ill daughter, she gained a new perspective and is committed to integrating spirituality into healthcare to support clients and families.

ENDORSEMENTS

This book is an open window to a mother's heart and soul as she is reluctantly taken on the painful journey of her precious daughters decline, suffering and death. For anyone experiencing the loss of a child or caring for others traversing a similar path, Heather's journal may help provide the words you cannot find or know how to say.
