ENDORSEMENTS

I recommend Phil's book as a great discipleship resource that will fortify believers in the ongoing battle for holiness. Reading it did me good!

Mark Stirling

Programme Director, Masters in Contemporary Christian Leadership, Oak Hill College, London

With a pastoral heart and many illuminating illustrations, Phil Allcock helps us see why the problem of indwelling sin is one we dare not ignore. His aim though is not to drive us to despair but to give us hope in Christ.

This is such a helpful book: blunt, in a way the Scriptures are blunt, but in the 21st century we may often avoid. Faithful, in pushing home biblical metaphors of sin's impact upon us and others, in a way we'd rather not hear. Hopeful, in offering divine assistance and eventual victory in our battle with sin, when we sometimes despair. I'm grateful to Phil for strengthening my resolve in the battle for godliness.

Matt Fuller

Vicar, Christ Church Mayfair, London

... a rare but much-needed contemporary book on sin. It's crystal clear, wise and practical - rich with well-applied biblical passages, Puritan insights and gripping illustrations. Above all, it is deeply encouraging.
