DESCRIPTION

For centuries the Psalms would have been the most familiar part of scripture to people who had no access to books. They are not only an integral part of the shared experience of the church but they also communicate God's guidance to this world, reveal his character and encourage his people. This volume continues Eric's exposition with the last two books of the Psalms (90 to 150) – which includes the earliest Psalm (Psalm 90 – attributed to Moses), and the Psalms of Ascent (Psalms 120 to 134). Each of these two books ends with their own doxology

MARKETING POINTS

An exposition with the last two books of the Psalms

The earliest Psalm (Psalm 90 – attributed to Moses)

As old as the second or third century B.C

AUTHOR

Eric Lane (1930 – 2023) trained to be a minister in the Church of England where he remained for 7 years. He was then called to be the minister of an Independent Evangelical Church where he pastored for 30 further years.

ENDORSEMENTS

"Without a doubt this commentary will be of great practical help to all students of the psalms."

New Life, Australia's Christian News Paper

A commentator of yesteryear once said that he never wrote a commentary on a Bible book before he had read the book through at least fifty times. Eric Lane shows the same extensive direct contact with the text and this gives his work an attractive and stimulating freshness. His views on the chronological order of the psalms are somewhat controversial but will likewise stimulate the reader.
