DESCRIPTION

AUTHOR

Lionel Ball (1934–2021) spent years gaining the respect of Londoners through his work with the London City Mission. Through his chaplaincy with the police he was granted freedom of the city.

ENDORSEMENTS

A fascinating and faith restoring book. Lionel's commitment to God, Scripture and the Christian faith is both uplifting and encouraging in what sometimes seems like a bewildering and heartless "modern" world.

Andy Foley

Good to see once again how God works in peoples life.

Betty Henderson

"..a lively account of work among the spiritually needy of London"

The Gospel Magazine

"Lionel Ball was a London City Missonary (LCM) for over thirty years, and this charming and heart warming narrative tells us his story from birth on the 'right side' of the welsh border, which of course gave him a life-long love for music and singing, to service in the RAF and then into the LCM."
