Creation, Fall, Restoration

A Biblical Theology of Creation

Andrew Kulikovsky

RELEASE DATE 10 MARCH 2009

RELATED TITLES

AUTHOR

Andrew S. Kulikovsky has an M.A. in Biblical Studies and Theology from Louisiana Baptist University and an active supporter of Creation Ministries International.

ENDORSEMENTS

The grand themes that should enliven our thinking are Creation, the Fall and Restoration. In each of these areas, the author discusses the views of scholars, explains their often conflicting perspectives, and shows that biblical theology provides a sure guide for those seeking answers...It is highly recommended to anyone seeking to engage with these issues in greater depth.

Evangelicals Now

Creation, Fall, Restoration: A Biblical Theology of Creation provides a refreshingly thorough yet eminently readable treatment of Genesis 1-3. Kulikovsky rightly argues that allowing the conclusions of modern science to determine our understanding of creation is basically a denial of the evangelical doctrine of sola scriptura. Sadly, many otherwise excellent evangelical scholars provide a confused or inconsistent hermeneutic in their treatment of the early chapters of Genesis, allowing the current conclusions of modern science to trump normative exegesis of the biblical text. Kulikovsky's work consistently exposes the faulty logic of such an approach. He discusses the role of science in biblical hermeneutics; the view of the Genesis creation account throughout church history; the overall purpose and function of the Genesis account; the days of creation; and the creation of mankind, the garden of Eden and the fall of man and its consequences. While not shying away from controversy, Kulikovsky ably interacts with relevant works representing diverse points of view. Even for those who do not share his conclusions, Kulikovsky's work is comprehensive and thought-provoking. In my thinking, his basic approach and treatment of the creation account is right on target!

Todd S. Beall
Chairman, Department of Old Testament Literature and Exegesis, Capital Bible Seminary, Lanham, Maryland

Andrew Kulikovsky's volume provides its readers with a clear and current overview of the debate among biblical scholars about the interpretation of the creation week in Genesis 1-2 as well as Adam's fall (Gen. 3).

Michael A. Grisanti
Professor of Old Testament, The Master's Seminary, Sun Valley, California

TECHNICAL DETAILS
LARGE TRADE PAPERBACK
312 Pages

ISBN 9781845504465
BISAC REL106000
PRICE £14.99 $23.99