Learning About Mission

Mission Matters

John Brand

RELEASE DATE 21 SEPTEMBER 2001

RELATED TITLES

AUTHOR

Born and brought up in a missionary family in India, John Brand lives with his wife Caroline and teenage sons in central Scotland having pastored churches in London and Liverpool been UK Director of Africa Inland Mission International. He is now Principal of the Faith Mission Bible College in Edinburgh.

ENDORSEMENTS

"Pastors and others who would lead congregations and individuals to be on mission for God will find here a comprehensive and readable introduction to the foundational facets of missions: the biblical basis, the history of, and the present need for missions. May God use this book to stir the souls of believers to be on mission for God!"

Harriet Gabourel

"Here is a little book whose author has a burden on his heart that comes across to the reader. He begins with the biblical basis for mission, reminding us that from Genesis to Revelation God's purpose is that the gospel should go out to the whole world, and that evangelism is the primary function of the church.
There follows a delightful cameo of church history. For those who bemoan the fact that we live in a day of small things, here is a chapter to lift up the heart. But there is still more work to be done, so the continuing challenge is to take the gospel to unreached individuals and people groups, and to see new communities of believers established.
The book closes with a call for a personal response. We are to look at the world biblically and see that its people are lost, while believers here are saturated with the news of the Kingdom. We are to pray for more workers, as well as for those already on the mission field. Those who are called by the Lord on this work must go in obedience.
This is a warm, practical, challenging book. Read it, buy it for your minister, pray that it will be greatly used."

Evangelical Times

"excellent... A wide range of subject matter is dealt with in a thoroughly readable and comprehensive way"

Timothy G. Alford

TECHNICAL DETAILS

POCKET PAPERBACK
96 Pages

ISBN 9781857924022
BISAC REL030000
PRICE £2.99 $3.99